Beyond BOW workshops provide opportunities to learn outdoors skills. Workshops are designed especially for women and are an extension of the Becoming an Outdoors-Woman program sponsored by Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks

Montana is home to over a 1,000 different wildflowers that bloom in a rainbow of colors. But have you stopped to sniff the flowers and wondered what you were smelling?

Join us for a day in the woods where you will learn the basics of flower identification.

The participants will take guided flower walks where you will learn about basic flower identification techniques, plant terminology, and plant families.

Instructor Jan Nixon has taught Beginning and Intermediate Plant ID classes for BOW since 1998. She leads botany and ecology field trips for the Montana Native Plant Society and the Museum of the Rockies.

Join us at the Jack Creek Preserve Outdoor Education Center located on 4,500 acres in the Madison Range. The Jack Creek Preserve Foundation is dedicated to giving people a deep appreciation for the importance of conserving wildlife and their habitat by providing a wide array of educational opportunities focused on the positive values of wildlife management, land stewardship, and hunter conservationists.

Jack Creek Preserve (JCP) can be accessed through Big Sky or Ennis; a gate code and road pass is required for entry. Persons registered for the class will get information on how to get the code and pass.
